

A nighttime photograph of a city skyline. The central focus is a tall, modern skyscraper with a distinctive crown, which is brightly lit with yellow and blue lights. Radiating lines of light emanate from the top of this building, creating a starburst effect against the dark blue sky. To the left, another tall building is visible, also lit up. The foreground and background are filled with other city buildings of varying heights, all illuminated with warm yellow lights from their windows. The overall scene conveys a sense of modernity and urban energy.
